FOOD & BEVERAGE MARKET INSIGHTS

After a Year of Uncertainty, M&A Activity is Expected to Fully Rebound in 2021

- In 2Q20, the Food & Beverage sector experienced a period of uncertainty with many buyers pausing M&A to assess the impact from COVID-19. In 2H20, when capital markets stabilized, reducing capital uncertainty, M&A activity rebounded, resulting in only a 13% decrease in total closed deals in 2020 compared to 2019.
- In 2021, large companies are expected to continue to divest non-core segments and allocate more capital for core acquisitions. This trend started in 2Q20 and is expected to drive additional consolidation within the sector.
- With debt markets stabilizing and significant "dry powder" for investment, private equity investors are increasing their exposure to food and beverage businesses due to the general resiliency of the sector and underlining consumer trends sustaining growth for emerging and trusted brands.
- With significant available capital and low interest rates, the 2H20 rebound is expected to continue through 2021 as buyers pursue deals that build scale and broaden distribution reach.

Increasing Valuation Multiples Driven by the Flight to Quality Assets

- Though deal volume has recently decreased, transaction multiples continue to remain at high levels. Scarcity of quality deal flow and competition for quality businesses by buyers and investors armed with ample capital continues to contribute to increased valuation multiples.
- Pushed towards higher valuations, buyers have more closely scrutinized COVID-19 related adjustments and revenue spikes from increased foot and online traffic in the traditional FDM channel.
- Food & Beverage businesses with profitable growth or a tangible recovery story during the pandemic will be attractive to both strategic buyers and private equity investors in 2021; concomitantly, M&A competition will continue to drive premium valuations.

Defining the New "Normal" for Consumer Trends

- COVID-19 has established a new paradigm for the consumer revolving around the home (eat at home, work from home, leisure at home) resulting in online grocery sales increasing over 22% from the same period last year.
- More than 55% of all consumers are eating at home more often since the pandemic began with many anticipating they will be dining out less in the future, driving growth for fresh food and prepared meals.
- Healthy and fresh has not been the only notable trend; comfort foods at home were also a major purchase for consumers in 2020. Food & beverage companies are continuing to explore merging and expanding "better for you" products with traditional products, with examples such as: global flavors, meat and dairy alternatives, and "better for you" alcoholic beverages.
- With consumers more conscious of where their food comes from, the meat and dairy alternatives industry continued its fast-paced growth by expanding in fast-food; most QSR companies are now offering a plant-based alternative product.
